

The oceans are the largest wildlife habitat on Earth. Most creatures live near the surface, but there is life even in the deepest, darkest, coldest depths.

