

Michigan International Speedway
Brooklyn, Michigan

Chicagoland Speedway
Joliet, Illinois

Indianapolis Motor Speedway
Speedway, Indiana

Iowa Speedway
Newton, Iowa

Bristol Motor Speedway
Bristol, Tennessee

Kansas Speedway
Kansas City, Kansas

Las Vegas Speedway
Las Vegas, Nevada

Auto Club Speedway
Fontana, California

Kentucky Speedway
Sparta, Kentucky

Circuit of the Americas
Austin, Texas

Atlanta Motor Speedway
Hampton, Georgia

Autódromo Hermanos Rodríguez
Mexico City, Mexico

Great champions

F1 is the pinnacle of "open-wheel" racing and the winner each season is called the world champion. NASCAR remains the top stock-car competition.

Dale Earnhardt Sr.

Nationality: US
Killed while racing at Daytona in 2001, Earnhardt had already won seven NASCAR titles.

Red Bull Ring
Spielberg bei Knittelfeld, Austria

Circuit Zandvoort
Zandvoort, Netherlands

Circuit de Spa-Francorchamps
Spa, Belgium

Silverstone Circuit
Silverstone, UK

Circuit de la Sarthe
Le Mans, France

Circuit Paul Ricard
Le Castellet, France

Algarve International Circuit
Portimão, Portugal

Circuit de Catalunya
Montmeló, Spain

Autodromo Nazionale Monza
Monza, Italy

Autodromo Internazionale Enzo e Dino Ferrari
Imola, Italy

Circuit Gilles Villeneuve
Montreal, Québec, Canada

Dover International Speedway
Dover, Delaware

Charlotte Motor Speedway
Concord, North Carolina

Darlington Raceway
Darlington, South Carolina

Circuit de Monaco
Monte Carlo, Monaco

Daytona International Speedway
Daytona Beach, Florida

Homestead-Miami Speedway
Homestead, Florida

Autódromo José Carlos Pace
São Paulo, Brazil

Motor racing

With engines roaring, race cars provide a thrilling spectator sport as they hurtle down the track, weave through chicanes, and hug hairpin bends. The highly tuned Formula 1 cars draw big crowds in many countries. In the United States, stock-car racing is more popular.

NASCAR Sprint Cup

The Sprint Cup Series is the world's premier stock-car racing competition. It involves 36 races over 10 months. As in F1, points awarded throughout the series decide the winner.

