

Craters and meteorites

Earth would be peppered with craters like the moon if it weren't for wind, water, and Earth's moving crust covering them up or wearing them away. More craters can be seen in old, quiet parts of Earth's crust such as in Canada and Australia.

