

World Eskimo Indian Olympics

Indigenous peoples have lived in the Alaska region for up to 10,000 years. Several groups—such as the Inuit, Tlingit, Athabascans, and the Yup'ik—come together every year for friendly competition during the World Eskimo Indian Olympics. These Olympics include many unique events, such as the blanket toss and ear pull.

This event is the "knuckle hop." You have to be strong to race along in this position!

Alaskan wildlife

Keep an eye out for moose and caribou when in Alaska. And off the Pacific coast, you might get a glimpse of beluga whales breaching or walrus sunning themselves. Alaska is also home to three species of bear—brown bears, black bears, and polar bears!.

The stars on the Alaskan flag represent the Big Dipper and the North Star.

The Big Dipper and the North Star

Alaskan husky

Mushing is an ancient form of transportation using dogs to pull sleds.