

Guam

Guam is in the North Pacific Ocean—on the opposite side of the world from the contiguous United States. It's so far away that when the sun rises in New York City, it's already nighttime in Guam! The island is surrounded by crystal clear waters and beautiful coral reefs. It has several wildlife refuges and marine preserves that protect its native plants and animals, some of which are endangered species.

Territory Facts

Abbreviation: GU

Capital: Hagåtña

Population: 169,000 people

Official languages: English and Chamorro

Official animal: carabao

Tropical fish off the coast of Guam

The official animal of Guam is the carabao—a type of water buffalo.

