

Helen Keller

Helen Keller was deaf and blind, so she had to learn to communicate in a different way than other children. When she grew up, she wrote books and traveled the world to share her life story. She was also the first American to own a Japanese dog called an Akita.

Civil rights

Alabama was at the heart of the civil rights movement that challenged unfair laws against Black people. When civil rights activist Rosa Parks refused to give up her seat and move to the back of the bus, she inspired other Black people to unite and boycott city buses. Their efforts succeeded in changing the law!
