

South Dakota

The golden Great Plains of South Dakota are a must-see. And while you're there, check out Badlands National Park. You might find an ancient surprise buried there! Don't miss the Crazy Horse Memorial, a mountain monument honoring an important figure from this region.

Mountain memorial

Crazy Horse was a renowned Lakota leader. He tirelessly fought to preserve Lakota culture and prevent Indigenous land from being taken by the United States government.

The Badlands

The fossils discovered in the hills of Badlands National Park are some of the most valuable fossils ever discovered. Archaeologists have found three-toed horses, ancient rhinos, woolly mammoths, and extinct sea critters such as ammonites!

Ammonite fossils can be found in the Badlands.

The state animal of South Dakota is the coyote.
