

Nebraska

The name Nebraska is based on the Oto Indian word for “flat water.” This refers to the Platte River, which flows through the area. Many settlers passed through Nebraska on the Oregon Trail, but the Ponca, Oto, and other Indigenous peoples were already living in the area.

Standing Bear

Standing Bear was a Ponca chief. When his tribe was forced to move by the US government, he spoke out against the unfair treatment. He later traveled around the United States and Europe to fight for the rights of Indigenous peoples.
