

Sandhills

These rolling hills of soft sand in Nebraska are called sand dunes, or sandhills. The Nebraska Sandhills are so massive that they cover a quarter of the entire state. It is the largest sand dune formation in the Western Hemisphere, and you can actually see it from space!

The Oregon Trail

In the 1800s, settlers began to travel west during the Westward Expansion. Many would go by wagon so they could bring essential items needed to start new lives. One of the most famous routes was called the Oregon Trail, which went through Nebraska.

Nebraska was the first state to use the 911 emergency call system.

*Chimney Rock
National Historic Site*

