

HOLD ON TIGHT! Followers of the Hindu religion crowd a train on its way to the northern Indian town of Govardhan, to take part in the Guru Purnima festival. Indian locomotives and train cars are not normally as crowded as this, but the country does run one of the largest and busiest railroad systems in the world, with enough track—some 71,500 miles (115,000 km) in total—to circle the Earth almost three times.
