

Convertible soft-top roof

Chevrolet Bel Air Convertible USA 1957

Aluminum trim on body panels

Large, wraparound, chrome bumper

Foldable hardtop, a feature many years ahead of its time

Chrome hubcaps

Ford Fairlane USA 1958

Lincoln Capri USA 1958

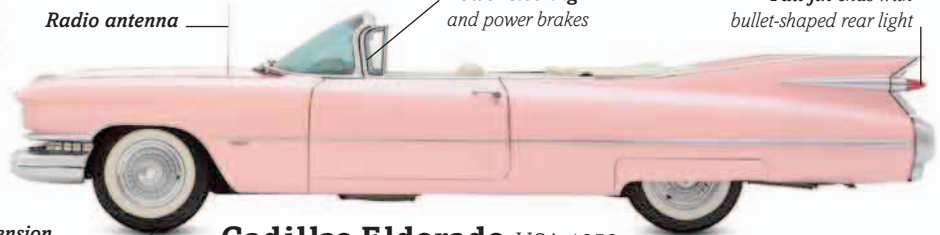

Radio antenna

Power steering and power brakes

Tail fin ends with bullet-shaped rear light

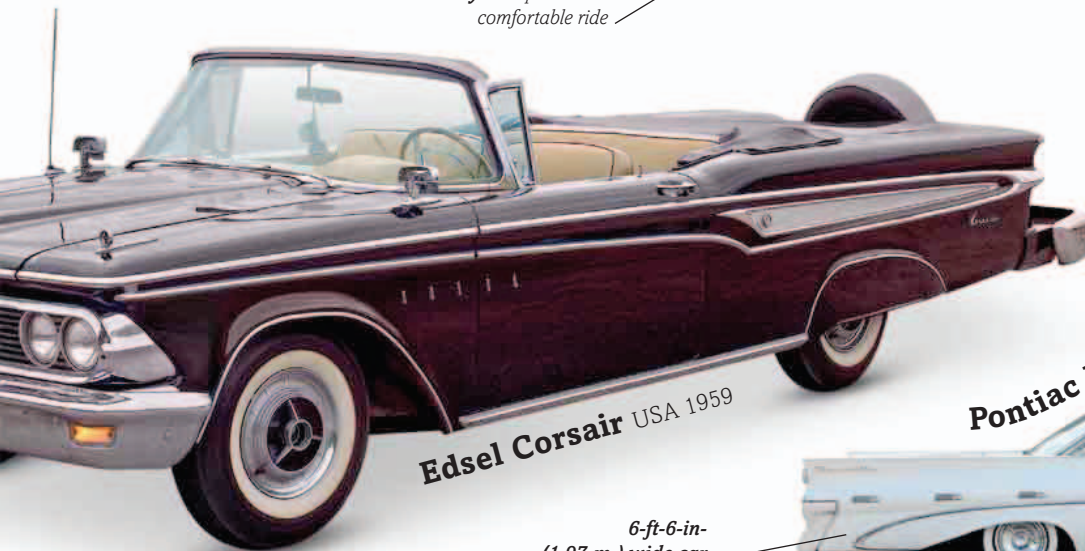

Advanced electric windows came as standard fitting

Air-powered suspension system provides a comfortable ride

Cadillac Eldorado USA 1959

From 1956, some Chrysler cars came with Highway Hi-Fi, a built-in record player.

Edsel Corsair USA 1959

6-ft-6-in- (1.97-m-) wide car

Pontiac Bonneville USA 1959

chrome, including chrome engine vents. The USA had entered the jet-aircraft age and this was reflected in the design of many cars—such as the Pontiac Bonneville, with its futuristic styling and large tail fins. Some cars also grew in length. The Chrysler New Yorker was more than 18 ft

(5.5 m) long, while the Lincoln Capri was even longer at over 20 ft (5.8 m). Automatic transmission was popular in big cars such as the Chevrolet Bel Air Convertible, which also had fuel injection and luxurious styling. It remains one of the most collectable cars from the fifties.