

Red pillars

Sandstone pillars rise up to 660 ft (200 m) at Zhangjiajie in southern China, close to the Tianzi Mountains. The pillars have been shaped by water erosion and weathering by ice and plant life.