

Bowhead whale

By the time the bowhead whale evolved, it had grown enormously in size, with an appetite to match. They feed on a massive 100,000 kg (220,000 lb) of plankton a year!

Giant flippers

Today

Bowhead whales can survive for more than 100 years!

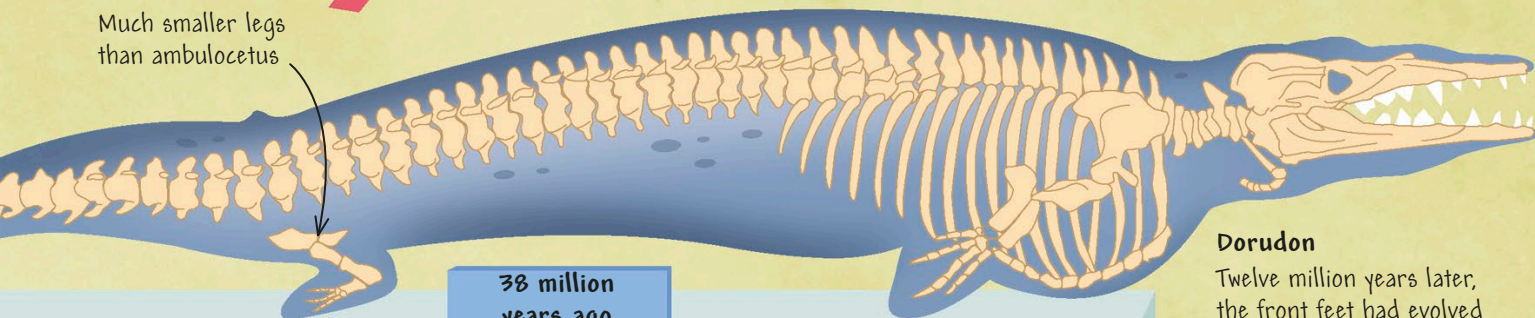

Palaeontologists are scientists who study fossils – the remains of ancient animals and plants.

Long, pointed snout

Much smaller legs than ambulocetus

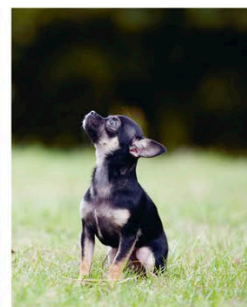

38 million years ago

Breeding

It's hard to imagine that a chihuahua evolved from a wolf, but it did! Humans breed dogs for herding, security, companionship, and even for their appearance.

Wolf

Chihuahua

Dorudon

Twelve million years later, the front feet had evolved into flippers and had become webbed.