Chimpanzee

Chimpanzees are the animals most closely related to humans. We both belong to the same family, the great apes, which also includes bonobos, gorillas, and orangutans. Chimps live together in noisy groups of around 30 members. They smile, laugh, fight, scream, play together, and form strong friendships.

Chimpanzees are very intelligent. They were the first animals that scientists saw using tools. Some chimps have learnt to crack open nuts with rocks, and others fish insects out of holes in trees with sharp sticks. Some even pick up moss to use as sponges to drink from. Not all chimps have these skills though – baby chimps must learn from watching the adults around them.
