Bamboo

Bamboo is a plant in a hurry. In fact, it's the fastest-growing plant on the planet. Some species of bamboo can grow 1 m (3 ft) in a single day! Strange as it may seem, bamboo is a type of grass, but the stems are tough and woody. Most species grow in wet forests or mountains.

Bamboo is famous as the food of giant pandas. However, we grow it as a crop, too, because it is strong and light. Bamboo has been used for thousands of years to make everything from musical instruments to buildings. Bamboo fibres are also used for cereal bowls, toothbrush handles, and can be woven into fabric for making comfy socks and pants!
