

Less than 1 percent of all bacteria
species on Earth
cause disease.

Lab-grown colony of Streptomyces bacteria

Bacterial colony

A colony of Streptomyces coelicolor bacteria is seen here in a magnified image. These bacteria release fluid droplets, which help scientists make as many as five different antibiotics. These are then taken in the form of tablets.