Korean dominance

Since short-track speed skating became an Olympic event in 1992, South Korean skaters have dominated, winning 48 medals, including 24 golds.

With a record 11 Olympic medals, Ireen Wüst of the Netherlands is the most successful long track speed skater ever.

Steady skating

As with all sports, speed skating success can be about luck! In the 2002 Olympics, Australia's Steven Bradbury was in last place, but all of his opponents fell over. He stayed on his skates, crossed the finish line first, and won gold.

Skaters always race in a COUNTER-CLOCKWISE direction.
