

Patolli

Patolli

This game was popular in the Aztec Empire. Players threw stones or beans to decide how their pieces would move around a cross-shaped board.

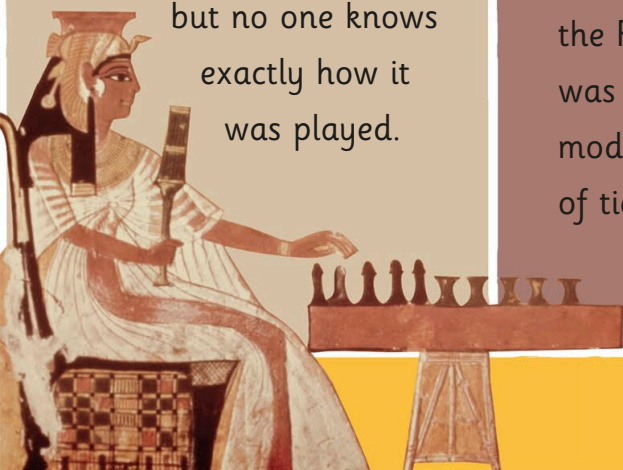

Petteia

The ancient Greek game of petteia (robbers) was a little like the modern game of checkers. The aim is to capture all of your opponent's pieces.

Senet

This ancient Egyptian board game dates to around 3,100BCE! The word senet means "the game of pulling," but no one knows exactly how it was played.

Terni Lapilli

This game, played in the Roman Empire, was similar to the modern-day game of tic-tac-toe.

The Royal Game of Ur

This strategy game is also known as "The Game of 20 Squares." It was first played around 3,000 BCE in Mesopotamia (ancient Iraq).
