

Playground games

Playing games is a fun way to make friends, but on top of that, games can teach you important skills such as teamwork and coordination.

Catch the dragon's tail

In this Chinese game, players line up with their hands on the shoulders of the person in front of them. The first person is the dragon's head and the person at the back is the tail. The "head" tries to catch the "tail" while the players in the middle stiffen and try to stop them.

Dan chhae jul normgi

In this traditional Korean game similar to skipping, two players each hold one end of a rope and swing it around. The other players must jump over the rope to avoid it. If the swingers catch a skippers legs, the skipper is out, but if a skipper times it so they land on the rope and stop it, they switch places with a swinger.
