

All the gear

Equipment varies based on conditions. In snow and ice, climbers wear crampons (a special spiked boot) and use an ice pick for grip. In rocky conditions, they hammer clamps into the rock, which they attach ropes to, and wear smooth shoes for grip.

Ice pick

Crampons

In 2017, American climber Alex Honnold scaled El Capitan in California without any ropes—a "free solo" climb.

Dangers

Mountaineers face many dangers when climbing peaks, including rock falls, ice falls, avalanches, and crevasses. But a change in the weather is sometimes the greatest threat. At heights, weather can change quickly, leaving climbers stranded.

Climbers usually work in pairs and are roped together, with one "belaying" the other to catch them if they fall.

FACT FILE

Type of sport:
Extreme

Number of players:

Equipment:

Rope, clamps, picks, boots, helmet

