

The background of the page features two large, stylized illustrations. On the left, an Indian Naga is depicted from the waist up as a human figure with a dark complexion, wearing a golden crown and jewelry, with a long, flowing golden shawl. On the right, an Indonesian Naga is shown as a multi-headed dragon with several orange and yellow heads, each with a red tongue, and a long, segmented body. The title 'Indian and Indonesian Naga' is centered over the illustrations.

Indian and Indonesian Naga

Naga appear in myths and legends from Hindu and Buddhist traditions across Asia. The appearance of the Naga can take many forms, depending on where it comes from.

APPEARANCE

The Indian Naga is usually human from the waist up and serpentlike from the waist down. It may be many different colors and have a forked tongue.

DWELLING

Beautiful underwater or underground palaces.

POWERS AND TRAITS

- Immortality
- Venom
- Physical strength

APPEARANCE

The Indonesian Naga are more traditionally dragon-like, and have up to seven heads.

DWELLING

Near water or in caves.

POWERS AND TRAITS

- Guardians of gates, entrances, and treasure.
- Shapeshifting