

Marsupial dragon

Huge creatures used to live across Australia, including lizards up to 16 ft (5m) long. It's possible the marsupial dragon emerged in stories as a way to explain the fossilized skeletons that belonged to these giant animals.

APPEARANCE

The marsupial dragon has a similar body to a kangaroo, but with a classic European dragon-like face and spine. It uses its wings to extend giant leaps, rather than actually fly.

DWELLING

In rocky areas. They use their strong legs to kick rocks and boulders around to form shallow nests.

POWERS AND TRAITS

- Can breathe fire (but they usually breathe blue smoke)
- Can use their strong legs to strike enemies

