

Touch me

I am a tactile plant. I look like a soft pebble, and when you touch me, you can feel the small dimples and indentations on my skin. As a succulent, I'll feel firmer when I'm hydrated; if I start to wrinkle and soften, it may be because I need a drink.

Look out for my flowers

Surprisingly, I produce delicate, daisylike flowers with yellow centers. Once I reach three years old, I will flower in summer or fall. My blooms usually have a sweet scent, and once they fade, I become dormant until two new leaves grow and the cycle of life repeats.

My daisylike flowers burst from the fissure between my leaves

Don't overwater me

I store water in my leaves, so be careful not to overwater me. From late spring to summer, do water me, but leave my soil to dry out before doing so again. And please water me in the morning so there's time for any excess water to evaporate.

