

Get to know me

I am a semi-epiphyte, so I can live both independently and on the surface of other plants. This means I can use my aerial roots to climb or even be trained. If I don't get enough light, my new leaves will grow toward the dark rather than the light. This is known as negative phototropism, and it's how I find trees to climb up in the rain forest, as I grow toward their shade.

BE AWARE: I am harmful if eaten, so keep me away from children and pets.
