

Be mindful of my leaves

I'm known as the "spineless" yucca because although my leaves are pointed, they are not as razor sharp as my outdoor-growing cousins. I could still poke someone in the eye, though, so keep me out of reach of curious youngsters and pets.

Look out for my flowers

I'm generally chosen for my upright spiked leaves and statement trunks, so you may be surprised to know that I can produce flowers. This usually happens only when I'm in my native country of Mexico; my blooms rarely appear when I'm grown as a houseplant, but when they do, they are white bell-shaped flowers with a sweet scent.

Keep me grounded

My top-heavy appearance means I may be best planted in a deep and heavy container that will keep me firmly grounded and stop me from toppling over. An impressive plant like me needs an impressive pot, which will have a great impact in your home.

BE AWARE: I am harmful if eaten, so keep me away from children and pets.
