

Pilosocereus azureus, pp.116–117

Blue

The soothing and tranquil effect of blue helps aid relaxation and induce a feeling of serenity. Studies have shown that we associate the color with clear skies and clean water, which have universal appeal. A blue plant is perfect for those moments of calm and mindfulness.

Saintpaulia hybrids, pp.118–119

Purple

Purple is a rare color in nature, which makes it mysterious and intriguing when we see it in foliage and flowers. Due to its rarity, it's seen as a symbol of wealth and prosperity. Having purple plants in your home is also believed to spark creativity.

Yellow

Associated with optimism and happiness, yellow is a cheery, energizing color that, like the sun, makes us feel warm. It is also thought to have a strong influence on the left side of the brain, which controls logic, perception, and deep thinking.

Codiaeum variegatum hybrids, pp.60–61

Orange

Like other warm colors such as red and yellow, fiery orange tones suggest enthusiasm and fun. This is a flashy, high-energy, attention-grabbing color, while also being balanced, friendly, and inviting.

Clivia miniata, pp.58–59

White

Representing peace and purity, white is the most serene color, bringing a sense of harmony to a room. Plants with white flowers or bracts and contrasting green foliage create a dazzling, fresh, and sophisticated feature.

Dendrobium orchid, pp.66–67