

MAIDENHAIR FERN

Adiantum raddianum

The dainty foliage of this fern has a uniquely soothing quality. The beautifully fanlike leaves appear to float above the plant and, with the lightest breeze, flutter like confetti in the air.

Everything about this plant is delicate in its detail.

“My fluttering foliage brings a calming motion.”

Help me thrive

POSITION

Place in a bright spot away from direct sunlight. Likes medium to high humidity, and temperatures of 60–75°F (15–25°C) are ideal.

POTTING

Use multipurpose, well-drained compost. Repot in spring, every 2 years, into a pot one size bigger to prevent it from becoming root-bound.

GROWTH RATE

Can reach heights of 18–24in (45–60cm), even as a young plant, but only gradually increases in width to its ultimate 32in (80cm).

CARE

Keep the compost moist with regular watering. Generally pest-free but scale can be a problem, so catch it early and wipe it away with warm water.

I will make you smile

My bright, fresh, delicate foliage evokes a sense of fascination and simple wonder, refreshing the mind and inviting thoughts of woodland and nature. Blow on my foliage to see movement that will make you smile.

Get to know me

“Maidenhair” refers to the goddess Venus, whose luscious locks my fluid foliage is said to resemble, while Adiantum, derives from the Greek meaning “unwetted,” due to my moisture-repellent leaves.
