

Help me feel at home

I am an epiphyte, which means that in nature

I grow attached to other plants and rocks, hence why I need to collect rainwater in my urn. At home, you can grow me epiphytically by surrounding my root ball with sphagnum moss and placing me in a nook in a piece of driftwood, tying me in place using wire.

Watch that I don't topple!

I'm top-heavy and happiest placed in a robust clay pot to prevent me from tipping over. I don't need pruning to make me lighter, but you can remove yellow or dying leaves and clean my leaves of dust by rinsing them.

BE AWARE:
The spines on my leaves can be a skin irritant
