

Be mindful of me

Please don't take all my leaves for your skin; leave me some so I can create energy to keep growing. Look out for soggy soft spots on my leaves—a sign you're giving me too much water. Remember, I'm a succulent, which means I store water in my leaves.

I will soothe your skin

Use the gel sap from inside my leaf to help soothe your sunburned skin or as a natural skin moisturizer. I contain auxin and gibberellins—anti-inflammatory plant hormones that can help reduce scars, stretch marks, acne, and signs of aging.

Give me a vacation

In summer, I can go on vacation to your garden as long as I'm put in a warm, sunny spot. Acclimatize me over a week or two by placing me in the outdoor sun for a short spell each day, so I'm not overexposed.

Remember to bring me back inside before the weather cools.

BE AWARE: I am mildly harmful if eaten, so keep me away from young children and pets
