

FLAMINGO FLOWER

Anthurium andraeanum

The flamingo flower is a big fashion statement. The red heart-shaped flower and glossy green foliage evoke exotic vibrancy and beauty. The plant will bring an energizing touch of the tropics to your home and will work hard to improve air quality.

“I provide bright, exotic blooms all year round.”

Help me thrive

POSITION

Likes plenty of indirect light and room temperature as long as it doesn't drop below 60°F (15°C). Mist regularly to create high humidity.

POTTING

Repot every 2 years when the roots start to grow through the drainage holes or circle inside the pot. Use a loam-free potting mix.

GROWTH RATE

Reaches around 18in (50cm) tall and 12in (30cm) across. The showy bright-red spathe are produced intermittently throughout the year.

CARE

Water regularly to keep the soil moist during spring and summer. Water less in winter. Apply a houseplant liquid feed every 2–3 weeks.

I'll remove toxins

I can aid your attention and focus, reducing brain fog, headaches, and drowsiness, by removing xylene, a chemical compound that is released into the air by office and home computers or printer systems.

Get to know me

My flower is not as it seems, since the red plate is in fact a spathe, or modified leaf. My true flowers are minute and appear densely on the flower spike, or spadix, which is yellow or cream. The function of the spathe is actually to protect the flowers.
