

I will calm you down

My lush green color is soothing and relaxing in an indoor environment—bringing the color of nature inside evokes feelings of hope as new life grows. You can relax in the knowledge that I am also a very safe houseplant to have; I'm nontoxic to pets or humans.

Help me feel at home

I am an epiphytic plant, meaning I gain moisture and nutrients from the air, which makes me a great houseplant for the more humid areas of your home, such as steamy bathrooms and kitchens.

Get to know me

My common name is bird's nest fern because the open rosette center of my plant looks nestlike. On the undersides of my leaf, I produce spores, which appear as brown lines running out horizontally to the midrib on my leaf.

Be mindful of me

My leaves are sensitive to chemicals, so please do not use leaf shine on me. Instead, just use tepid water and a damp cloth to clean the dust off my foliage.
