

PLANTS TO CALM AND RELAX

The power plants have to reduce the body's stress hormone cortisol is well established. Greens and whites calm us and soften our interiors by bringing nature indoors, while the sensory experiences of touch, sight, and scent enrich our spaces and evoke a feeling of tranquility.

Dendrobium orchid ▼

Dendrobium

These towering beauties are adorned with flowers from the bottom to the top. Some of these orchids produce pure, tranquil, calming white blooms to help you destress, while their sweet, fruity scent will leave you feeling refreshed and renewed. They also possess valuable air-purifying abilities, which will make your space feel cleansed and fresh and help you tackle your day with energy and enthusiasm. See pp.66–67

Barbados aloe ►

Aloe vera

Not only is aloe vera an interesting structural plant for your interior, with its tall, fleshy spikes, but it can also be used to soothe your skin if you feel as though you need pampering. Use the moisturizing sap to invigorate, soothe, and cool your skin while your mind relaxes so that your whole body experiences the benefits of nature. See pp.38–39
