

JOSEPH'S COAT

Codiaeum variegatum hybrids

There are few plants that come anywhere near the mood-enhancing beauty of this one. It's not just the outrageous fusion of foliage color but the way the veins are spectacularly enhanced by their contrasting colors of yellows, reds, oranges, greens, and even purples. You could pluck off a leaf and frame it on the wall—it really is that special.

“My multicolor dazzle will lift your spirits.”

Help me thrive

POSITION

Bright, indirect light keeps the colors vibrant, so by a southwest, southeast, or east-facing window is ideal, in temperatures of at least 60°F (15°C).

POTTING

Keep in the same pot to control its size, or repot in spring for growth, using a pot one size bigger than the original and a free-draining compost.

GROWTH RATE

Indoor plants tend to grow to 2ft (60cm) tall and are slow compared to plants grown in a greenhouse, which can reach 6½–10ft (2–3m).

CARE

In spring and summer, water to keep the soil moist and mist daily, then feed every 2 weeks. Water less in winter so the soil is moist, not wet.

Help me feel at home

I'm happiest in a room with a stable temperature and no drafts; otherwise, I risk dropping my leaves. I can grow bushy, so a spot with room to grow is best, but if I get too big, you can prune me back as much as necessary.

Get to know me

I have brothers and sisters with many different leaf shapes—they can be long and thin or form curls and corkscrews. They also come in many color combinations, such as fiery reds or deep purples, so you can have fun collecting them. We are all unique in our patterns and colors, so when you choose one of us, you'll know we're one of a kind.
