

3 Preheat the oven to 450°F (230°C). Then, to start making the meringue, crack an egg into the small bowl. If bits of shell fall in, fish them out—but don't break the yolk!

Hold on to the small bowl firmly throughout this process.

4 You make meringue with egg whites only. To separate the yolk, place the egg cup over it and pour the white into the mixing bowl. Do the same with the other three eggs. Discard the four yolks.

5 Whisk the egg whites on high speed until they are frothy. If you want help with this, ask an adult. Then add ½ teaspoon of cream of tartar. Keep beating, but stop to test the mixture every few seconds. It's ready when it forms stiff peaks.

Don't use the mixer with wet hands, and unplug it when you've finished.

6 Now gradually add the sugar to the egg whites and begin beating again. Keep going until the mixture looks shiny and stiff. Then stop and ask an adult to help you remove the beaters and clean them.

The mixture should stay in peaks when you lift up the beaters.

7 Take the ice cream out of the freezer. Lift it out of its bowl by gently pulling the plastic wrap. Turn it upside down on top of the cake, ensuring it doesn't overlap the edge. Peel away the plastic wrap.
