

Guru Nanak, founder of Sikhism

Sikhism

Sikhism was founded 500 years ago by an Indian teacher called Guru Nanak. He taught that there is one God, who can be worshipped anywhere, and that all humans are equal.

Statue of the Hindu god Ganesh

Hinduism

Hinduism, the ancient religion of India, is practiced in many different ways. Hindus worship hundreds of gods. One of the most popular is Ganesh, who has an elephant's head.

Shinto
Buddhism

Shinto is an ancient Japanese religion. Its followers worship gods and spirits of the natural world.

Taoism

Taoism is an ancient Chinese religion that began in the fourth century BCE. Its followers try to live in balance with nature.

PACIFIC OCEAN

KEY

Islam

A crescent moon and star.

Buddhism

A wheel with eight spokes.

Taoism

This symbol shows two opposites in balance.

Christianity

The cross on which Jesus died.

Shinto

A torii, or sacred gateway.

Judaism

The star of David, who was a Jewish king.

Sikhism

A khanda (set of swords).

Hinduism

A symbol for "om," a sacred sound.

World of faiths

The world's major religions all began in Asia and the Middle East, then spread to the rest of the world.

Buddhism

Buddhism was founded in northeast India 2,500 years ago by a teacher called the Buddha (left). Unlike other religions, it is not based on a belief in gods. The goal of Buddhism is to find true wisdom.