

How many animals are there in the world?

There are trillions of individual animals living in the world—far too many to count! However, scientists think there are about 8.7 million different species (kinds) of animal on the planet. They sort animal species with similar features into different groups.

