

The brothers were arrested and brought to Joseph. He pretended to be angry.

“The rest of you can go free,” he said, but the one who stole my cup shall stay and be my slave.”

The other brothers were horrified. Their father had already lost one of his favorite sons—it would break his heart if they went back without Benjamin. “Take one of us instead,” they begged.

Then Joseph knew they had really changed. He told them who he was and asked them to fetch Jacob so they could all live together in Egypt.

