

and blistering boils that burst out on people's skin.

Then, heavy hailstones
hurtled down,

swarms of locusts
gnawed and nibbled,

and a dreadful darkness fell.

Finally, worst of all, every firstborn son perished.

The king gave in and told the Hebrews to go.

"Go to the king and tell him that the Lord says, 'Let my people go, so that they can worship me.'"
