

Lap it up

In New Zealand, flax plants provide a tasty drink for geckos. As they climb up the stem and drink from the flower, they get pollen all over their chins.

The yellow pollen stains the gecko's chin.

Running wild

Tiny honey possums in Australia clamber all over the flowers of a banksia plant to gather nectar. Of course, they get covered in pollen while doing so!

