

PEONIES

Peonies (Paeonia species and cultivars) are valued for their showy blooms, filling borders with whites, pinks, yellows, and reds in late spring and early- to mid-summer. Flowers include single, double, or anemone forms (with broad, outer petals and a mass of petaloids in the center); some are scented. They may need support when in full bloom and make good cut flowers. The foliage is striking, too, often tinged bronze when young and rich red in fall. As well as many attractive species and a wide range of herbaceous hybrids, there are several tree peonies (cultivars of P. x suffruticosa), and intersectional hybrids, which are crosses between the latter two. Peonies prefer sun, but will tolerate light shade, and need rich, well-drained soil. These long-lived plants resent transplanting and are best left undisturbed.

P. lactiflora 'Sarah Bernhardt' ① [double]

P. lactiflora 'Pillow Talk' [double]

P. x suffruticosa 'Hana-kiso' ① [tree peony]

P. x suffruticosa 'Hakuo-jisi' [tree peony]

P. lactiflora 'White Wings' ① [single]

P. lactiflora 'Whitley Major' ① [single]

P. lactiflora 'Bowl of Beauty' ① [anemone]

P. cambessedesii ① [single]

P. lactiflora 'Cheddar Gold' [semidouble]

P. lactiflora 'Festiva Maxima' [double]

P. lactiflora 'Shirley Temple' ① [double]

P. lactiflora 'Lady Alexandra Duff' [semidouble]

P. x suffruticosa 'Yachiyo-tsubaki' [tree peony]

P. obovata var. alba ① [single]

P. japonica [single]

P. lactiflora 'Jan van Leeuwen' [single]

P. emodi ① [single]

P. 'Coral Charm' [semidouble]