

Constellations

You will soon be spotting constellations. This is a part of the constellation of Sagittarius.

Orion's belt

There are lots of constellations. One of the easiest to pick out is Orion – by spotting the three bright stars that make up this hunter's belt.

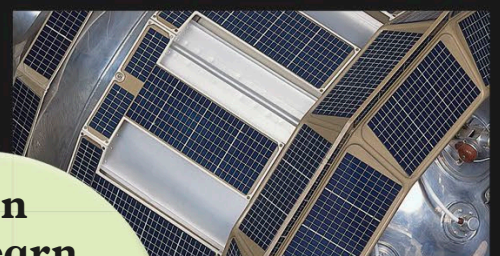

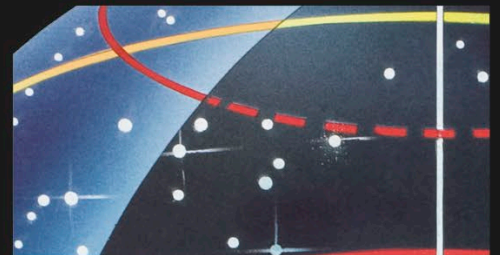

Light pollution

Streetlamps and the light from cars and houses all make the sky brighter, which makes it harder to see. But you can still see the Moon and main constellations. If you are lucky, you may see a comet or a meteor.

Picture detective

Look through the Space for Everyone section and see if you can identify the pictures below.

Turn and learn

Stargazing:
pp. 108-109
Constellations:
pp. 112-113