

Start spotting the constellations

You'll find it soon becomes easy to pick out more constellations than those shown. Some, such as the well-known hunter Orion, are visible in both northern and southern skies.

The Great Bear

In Roman mythology, Ursa Major (the Great Bear) represents Callisto, a beautiful girl who was turned into a bear by Juno, the wife of Jupiter – king of the gods in Roman mythology.

Camelopardalis

This constellation was named in 1613, which was only some 400 years ago – that's relatively recent for a constellation. It represents a giraffe.

Cepheus

This constellation is said to show a mythical Greek king, who stands next to his wife, Cassiopeia.
