

Why is space so dark?

Space is dark because there is nothing there to reflect light. From space, the Earth looks lit up because light from our Sun reflects off sea and land, and the particles in our atmosphere.

US astronaut Michael Gernhardt went on four separate space missions, and spent more than 23 hours walking around in space.

Picture detective

Look through the What is Space? section and see if you can identify the pictures below.

Turn and learn

Searching for a star:
pp. 48-49
Living in space:
pp. 40-41