

Bagpipes

You blow here.

Scotland is famous for bagpipes. They are played by blowing air into a bag and then squeezing the air up through the pipes.

A world of music

Different countries and regions have very different instruments and styles of music. This traditional music is played by local people, or folk, so it is often called folk music.

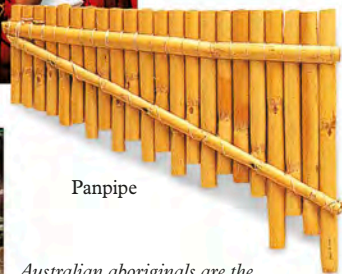

People who live in the eastern mountains of the United States are famous for their banjo playing. Banjos were first brought to the United States by enslaved Africans.

Banjo

Panpipes are made from pipes of different lengths and are popular in South America. You play them by blowing over the top of the pipes. Longer pipes make lower sounds.

Panpipe

Australian aboriginals are the only people to play the didgeridoo. It is made from a hollow bamboo branch. It is very difficult to play well.

Didgeridoo

