

PEOPLE AND PLACES

In lots of ways, people are the same everywhere: they build homes, they wear clothes, they eat meals, and they have fun. However, people in different countries have developed their own languages and customs, which vary widely from place to place.

Did you know that in Spain there is a festival in which people throw tomatoes at each other? Did you know that the Chinese language has more than 50,000 written characters? Did you know that India produces more films each year than any other country?

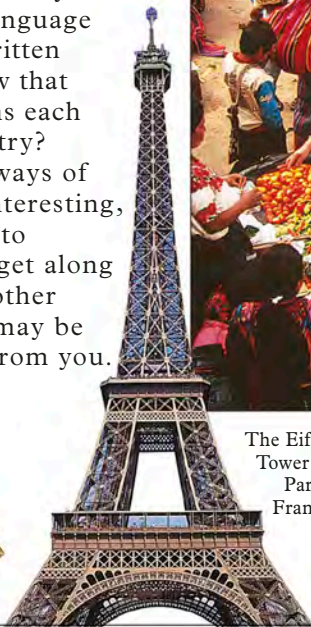

Learning about other ways of life is not only interesting, it also helps you to understand and get along with people in other countries who may be very different from you.
