NORTHERN AFRICA

The spectacular pyramids and priceless treasures of Ancient Egypt are world famous. Art and culture are still very important to people all over northern Africa. A great range of musical and artistic traditions have been passed down through families for generations.

Making music

African rhythms have influenced modern jazz and blues music, and are now an important ingredient of African pop music. These drummers are from Ghana in West Africa.

Famine

Up to 233 million Africans suffer from a lack of food. When the rains don't come, crops fail and disaster strikes, but this isn't the only cause. Sadly, humans are responsible, too. War and the need to move to avoid conflict, corruption, lack of planning, and misuse of aid can all result in starvation. These children in the Sahel region of northern Africa are in danger of starving.

The Berber people

Berbers are an indigenous people of North Africa. They have their own language and religion, but through conquests have also learned Arabic and become Muslim. Many live in cities, but others have a traditional, nomadic way of life.

The big bass drums are called brekete drums.
