

Cyprus

Kyrenia Castle

There has been a castle overlooking the harbor of Kyrenia for hundreds of years. Its present structure dates from the 16th century.

This intricately decorated copper pot is used for serving coffee.

Copper pot

Copper has been mined in Cyprus for 6,000 years. People have traditionally used it to make copperware, such as cooking utensils and this pot.

Grape candy

Made with grapes and nuts, shoushouko is a traditional Cypriot dessert. The grape juice gives it a chewy texture.

Cat island

Since ancient times, Cyprus has been full of cats. There are almost 300,000 more cats than people on the island.

Apollo, Greek god of the sun, is shown with his instrument, the lyre.

Divided city

The capital city of Nicosia is split into a Greek part and a Turkish part. The minarets of the historic Selimiye Mosque tower over the Turkish district.

Mosaics of Paphos

Ancient floor mosaics depicting scenes from Greek mythology were discovered in Paphos in 1962 and are now on display at the city's Archaeological Park.

3,572 sq miles (9,251 sq km)

1.3 million

Nicosia

Greek, Turkish

Traces of this Mediterranean island's rich past can be seen in its Stone-Age settlements, Roman ruins, and Byzantine churches. Since 1974, Cyprus has been divided, with Turkey running the north, and Greek Cypriots the south.

