

Oman

Asia

Mountain village

The village of Balad Sayat on the slopes of the Al-Hajar Mountains is known for its fertile agricultural terraces. Many people live on Oman's mountains, where the climate is cooler.

Irrigation system

The aflaj are ancient Omani irrigation channels that carry water from wells on high ground down to farms and villages below.

Omani tunic

The dishdasha is a long-sleeved, ankle-length tunic. For ceremonial occasions, it is worn with a dagger called a khanjar.

- 119,499 sq miles (309,500 sq km)
- 4.7 million
- Muscat
- Arabic, other languages (+4)

Oman has one of the most diverse landscapes on the Arabian Peninsula, with rolling sand dunes, soaring mountains, lush oases, and a rugged coastline. Its capital, Muscat, is nestled in a fertile zone between the Al-Hajar Mountains and the Gulf of Oman.

Yemen

Desert defenses

Al-Hajarrah is a 12th-century village. Built on a steep cliff face, its towering, fortified houses helped ward off invaders in the past.

Jabal An-Nabi Shu'ayb
3,666 m (12,028 ft)

Dragon's blood tree

Growing only on the islands of the Socotra archipelago, this unusual tree gets its name from the red resin that oozes from its bark.

- 203,850 sq miles (527,968 sq km)
- 29.9 million
- Sanaa
- Arabic

Yemen is a mostly mountainous country. In ancient times, its position on the Red Sea made it an important trading nation, especially for coffee, frankincense, and myrrh. Since 2015, Yemen has been devastated by civil war.

