

Bangladesh

The Sundarbans

Mangrove forests grow in the delta of the Ganges River. Called the Sundarbans, these are home to animals, including the rare Bengal tiger and chital deer (left).

Tea picking

This worker picks tea leaves by hand on a tea plantation in Sylhet. Bangladesh ranks among the world's top 10 tea producers.

0 50 km
0 50 miles
(approximate scale)

Driving rickshaws

Two-wheeled and three-wheeled vehicles called rickshaws are a common mode of transportation in Bangladesh. About a million people earn a livelihood by driving a rickshaw.

Sweet dumplings

Traditional rice cakes made of rice flour, milk, and coconut, called pitha, are a special treat.

Flower harvest

The water lily grows wild in many of Bangladesh's lakes and rivers. It is harvested for its stalks—for eating—and the flowers.

- ☑ 57,320 sq miles (148,460 sq km)
- 👤 162.6 million
- ★ Dhaka
- 🗣 Bengali, other languages (+8)

The small, South Asian country of Bangladesh is situated on the Bay of Bengal. It has a changing landscape of sweeping hillsides, mangrove forests, and riverside communities.

New Year's mask

Pôhela Boishakh is an important festival that celebrates the Bengali New Year. People take part in processions and make decorative masks.

Festival masks feature colorful depictions of characters from Bengali folklore.

Saka Hapong
1,052 m
(3,451 ft)