

Malaysia

The art of defense

A traditional Malaysian martial art, called Silat Melayu, helps develop self-defense techniques. Many children learn it at school.

Bare hands or weapons can both be used for this martial art.

Taking flight

Kite flying is popular in Malaysia. The wau bulan, meaning "moon kite," is a large kite with a bamboo frame and floral decorations.

Giant bloom

The world's biggest flower belongs to a plant called rafflesia, found in some parts of Malaysia. It can reach 3 ft (1 m) wide and produces a foul smell to attract insects.

Noisy caller

Malaysia's national bird, the rhinoceros hornbill is recognized by its bright beak and a hollow hornlike structure on its head that amplifies its song.

Indonesia

Marine life

The Raja Ampat coral reef north of Sorong in New Guinea is home to whales and dolphins, more than 500 species of coral, and thousands of different fish.

Shadow puppetry

Used in traditional Indonesian storytelling, these puppets cast dramatic shadows when held in front of a screen and lit from behind. Puppeteers use rods to animate the characters.

- 735,358 sq miles (1,904,569 sq km)
- 267 million
- Jakarta
- Javanese, Sundanese, other languages (+3)

The largest country in Southeast Asia, Indonesia consists of 13,466 islands across 3,100 miles (5,000 km) of sea. Most people live on the island of Java.